I'm moving next week. It's a pity because I really liked my flat. It even overlooked a park. They kept raising the rent, though. The new flat's much smaller. The good thing is it's closer to my office and it's in a quieter neighbourhood, too. I guess I'll get used to it.

I saw the film Save It for Tomorrow last night with Susan and Myra. It's one of those romantic dramas whose ending you know from the start. You know how that irritates me. I couldn't complain, though, because of the girls. They were crying their eyes out.

Task 3

Questions 11-15

Read about Mariah Dionne.

For questions 11-15, complete the form with one word in each space.

Write your answer only here in this exam booklet.

There is an example at the beginning (0).

Mariah Dionne – food stylist

Mariah Dionne has been working as a food stylist for 11 years. It all started with her hobby of taking food photographs while she was studying Criminology at the University of Toronto, in her home town.

Mariah's mum, a successful Canadian painter, had high hopes for her only child. She wanted her to become an artist like herself. But Mariah decided to become a food stylist. "A food stylist is an artist of their own," says Mariah. "Anytime you're presenting food, you have to start with the idea that you need good composition, good textures and colours, so there are always all of these elements of art," says this Vancouver-based food stylist.

It is a difficult task to break into the food styling industry, so it was not easy to succeed. She had to knock on doors, make phone calls and show up personally just to get a job. It was even more difficult being a single working mum of 12-year-old twins. However, their father, Peter (35), who now lives in Ottawa, spends his weekends with them.

"Our marriage just didn't work," says Mariah. "We were only 21, probably too young. Although we divorced in the end, we stayed good friends. He will be at my wedding next month in Montreal. I feel at 35 I'm ready for a romantic relationship."

It hasn't been easy for Mariah, but now she is a successful food stylist who works for celebrity chefs and top cooking magazines.
