OPĆE UPUTE

Pozorno pročitajte sve upute i slijedite ih.

Ne okrećite stranicu i ne rješavajte zadatke dok to ne odobri dežurni nastavnik.

Nalijepite identifikacijske naljepnice na sve ispitne materijale koje ste dobili u sigurnosnoj vrećici.

Ispit čitanja traje 70 minuta.

Ispit se sastoji od zadataka povezivanja, zadataka višestrukoga izbora i zadatka dopunjavanja.

- U zadacima povezivanja svaki sadržaj označen brojem povežite s odgovarajućim sadržajem koji je označen slovom (zadatci 1 i 3).
- U zadacima višestrukoga izbora od više ponuđenih odgovora odaberite samo jedan (zadatci 2 i 4).

Pri rješavanju ovih zadataka možete pisati po stranicama ove ispitne knjižice.

Točne odgovore morate označiti znakom X na listu za odgovore.

- U zadatku dopunjavanja dopunite praznine upisivanjem sadržaja koji nedostaje (zadatak 5). Odgovore upišite samo na predviđeno mjesto u ovoj ispitnoj knjižici. Pišite čitko. Nečitki odgovori bodovat će se s nula (0) bodova.

Upotrebljavajte isključivo kemijsku olovku kojom se piše plavom ili crnom bojom.

Kada riješite zadatke, provjerite odgovore. Ako pogriješite u pisanju, pogreške stavite u zagrade, precrtajte ih i stavite skraćeni potpis. Zabranjeno je potpisati se punim imenom i prezimenom.

Želimo Vam mnogo uspjeha!

Ova ispitna knjižica ima 16 stranica, od toga 2 prazne.

Ako ste pogriješili u pisanju odgovora, ispravite ovako:

Task 1

Questions 1-12

You are going to read an article in which people talk about the effect of technology on our lives.

For questions 1-12, choose one person from A-F.

Mark your answer on the answer sheet.

There is an example at the beginning (0).

Technology and the family

A Alan

"Well I think it's a shame. Children don't play with each other anymore like they did when I was young. We were always outside, running around, playing football, climbing trees. All children do today is stay in their bedroom in front of a computer screen. It can't be good for their brains. And even when they do get together socially, they don't talk to each other, they just play with their smartphones. Young people nowadays don't have any social skills, and they can be so rude it's shocking. When I was a boy we looked up to our elders. Today's kids just ignore them."

B Brian

"Machines help us with tasks that in the old days took up hours of hard work. Life at home is better because of technology. And that means more room for things we like. Thanks to microwave ovens, there are no stoves or pots or pans, and all that mess. Dishwashers wash all the dishes without any bother at all. When my grandmother was a young housewife, it took a whole day to wash the family's clothes, and even longer to dry them."

C Catherine

"Life has been transformed by technology in many positive ways. Today's busy families can keep in touch with each other wherever they are. Parents can check in with their children, see where they are, what they're doing. Children can instantly reach their parents in an emergency. But I sometimes wonder. Technology also keeps families apart, children on computers or smartphones, mum and dad in front of laptops. The family is physically together, but are they paying attention to each other? Or just listening for a ping or a beep, a new text message or missed call?"

D David

"There are so many ways that technology helps with life. Washing machines, dishwashers, vacuum cleaners have made a world of difference. Mobile phones are great, and could mean the difference between life and death in emergencies. Home entertainment is so much better that families are more likely to spend time together. Sure there are problems. Kids in bedrooms all day instead of playing outside and getting exercise. Obesity is also a fast growing problem. And children don't socialize like they used to, they're too busy with their smartphones. But on the whole I think technology is good for us."

E Esther	F Fiona
"Computers, smartphones, the internet, email... our lives have completely changed, and it's all happened so quickly we're still in shock. It's like we've got these super-advanced new toys and we don't yet know how to play with them. Families need to learn to control our use of technology, to understand that some things are more important, like good relationships. Otherwise technology will continue to control us. But we'll get better at dealing with these new powers technology has given us, and when we do, the problems families are having now will become a thing of the past."	"I can't imagine life without technology. Like TV, so much better now, with smart televisions connecting to the internet. And YouTube is fantastic, you can watch or listen to anything you like, whenever. And what about computer games? I know they can make you crazy, but it's great fun playing with someone on the other side of the world. Yes, cyberspace can be a risky place, you never know who you're talking to, and cyber-bullying is horrible. And yes, it can be difficult for us grown-ups to control young people. But we have to adapt to this new 'jungle'."

Which person says...

0 the more we get used to it, the more technology will benefit us?

1 domestic life was more demanding before technology?

2 children no longer respect adults?

3 families must be more disciplined in how they use technology?

4 life is more interesting because of technology?

5 they are not sure whether technology is good for us or not?

6 technology is bad for health?

7 technology saves time?

8 that because of technology families communicate less?

9 technology provides families with more opportunities to do things together?

10 we don't understand technology yet?

11 there are more advantages than disadvantages in technology?

12 young people may become an easy target when using technology?

Task 2

Questions 13-18

Read the text below.

For questions 13-18, choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D).

Mark your answer on the answer sheet.

Musical ability

When I was a boy in London in the 1970s, music was everywhere. We listened to the radio from morning till night, and could recite the Top Ten chart of pop singles on any day of the week. Our heroes were The Beatles, The Stones, The Kinks, Bob Dylan and many more. We knew the lyrics by heart, and some of us learned to play instruments, unfortunately not including me.

It wasn't for want of trying. I was incessantly plonking, picking, strumming and banging on the various musical devices lying around at home. One brother played the guitar, another the piano and my sister sang in a choir. All of these activities were extra-curricular and had to be paid for, on top of school fees. When I asked my parents if I could take up an instrument, they wouldn't mention the money, or my poor school record. They would always quote Mrs Mallory, the school music teacher: "That boy is tone deaf."

Until I was a young adult I actually believed that I was tone deaf. In fact, I later found out, such a disability is very rare, like deafness itself. It was a professor at university who explained to me that the term was widely talked about by people who had no idea of its true meaning. A passionate music teacher himself, he added that many music teachers, while good musicians, attributed tone deafness to students' laziness. And he also said that all sorts of notions, like the fact that tone deafness was inheritable, were to be taken with a large pinch of salt.

Though I still doubted my music credentials, I was encouraged by the professor's insights and began to believe that I might be able to get music after all. The summer after my finals I went to Spain, and a group of us went out for the night to a disco in Granada. The two sensations that year were Billy Jean by Michael Jackson and Let's Dance by David Bowie. I danced like I never had before, and fell hopelessly in love with an American musician from El Paso. She told me I had a natural sense of rhythm. I knew she was right, and that Mrs Mallory was wrong.

Many years later I found myself back in London, married but unemployed, and trying to establish myself as a poet. One evening at a reading I met Brendan, a man who was greatly respected in the poetry world, and who was also an Irish musician. I had a soft spot for Irish music, how it made you dance, its haunting melodies, its passionate themes, but more than anything because my parents were Irish. Brendan and I became friends and he said I should take up the bodhrán, the Irish drum. London was full of bands without a drummer, he said, and you could make a few pounds while having a good time. My wife was sceptical. But I bought a drum, and he gave me a couple of lessons and some recordings I could use to learn to play. And learn I did.

Irish music is largely made up of jigs, reels and airs, and its simple tunes are listened to wherever a pint of Irish beer can be found, and way beyond the shores of Ireland. That's what makes me so proud. The genre had been saved by those who had left Ireland for America during and after the Great Hunger. The efforts of the American Irish not only preserved a dying tradition, they also produced a sound which is recognisable throughout the modern world.

In an age of robots, schools are teaching our children to be redundant

In the future, if you want a job, you must be as unlike a machine as possible: creative, critical and socially skilled. So why are children being taught to behave like machines? We succeed in adulthood through collaboration. (0) _____. Why are curriculums and tests so narrow that they alienate any child whose mind does not work in a particular way?

There is, as Graham Brown-Martin explains in his book Learning {Re}imagined, a common reason for these discrepancies. Our schools were designed to produce the workforce required by 19th-century factories - workers who would sit silently at their benches all day, behaving identically, to produce identical products. Collaboration and critical thinking were just what the factory owners wished to discourage.

When they are allowed to apply their natural creativity and curiosity, children love learning. They learn to walk, to talk, to eat and to play spontaneously, by watching and experimenting. (19) _____. We sit them down, force-feed them with useless facts and test the life out of them.

As far as relevance and utility are concerned, we might as well train children to operate a spinning jenny, the textile machine. (20) _____. We make them suffer this life-defying, dehumanising system for nothing. The less relevant the system becomes, the harder the rules must be enforced, and the greater the stress.

There is no single system for teaching children well, but the best ones have this in common: they open up rich worlds that children can explore in their own ways, developing their interests with help rather than indoctrination. (21) _____. They use them to create projects, share material with their teachers and each other, and can contact their teachers with questions about their homework.

There are plenty of teaching programmes designed to work with children, not against them. (22) _____. Cutting across traditional subject boundaries, they manage a shipping warehouse, excavate a tomb or rescue people from a disaster. A similar one, called Quest to Learn, is based on the way children teach themselves to play games. To solve the complex tasks they're given, they need to acquire plenty of information and skills. They do it with the excitement and enthusiasm of gamers.

The first multi-racial school in South Africa, Woodmead, developed a fully democratic method of teaching, whose rules and discipline were overseen by a student council. (23) _____. By such integration of the content, learning is made authentic because it is rooted in the student's natural surroundings and totally relevant to their everyday life.

The tragedy for many European countries is that such programmes succeed not because of their systems and governments, but despite them. (24) _____. What they need is to change the system, to equip children for the likely demands of the 21st century, rather than those of the 19th. They need to engineer the children out of the factory and into the real world.

- D Is it surprising when children, bursting with energy and excitement, are confined to the spot like battery chickens?
- E Their skills are not only redundant but counter-productive.
- F When they get to school, we suppress this instinct.
- G The less autonomy they are granted in choice of the content and the teaching methods, the more they are blamed for the failures of the system.

From impulse shopping to a multi-million business

Inspiration for an entrepreneur often comes when they look for something - a service or a product they need - only to find it doesn't (0) ____ exist. In Sebastien Fabre's case it was his wife's impulse shopping that provided the inspiration that (25) ____ to a successful business.

Mr Fabre knew nothing about fashion, but he (26) ____ that his wife had a lot of bags. And these purchases weren't just any old bags, but high-end designer ones. Yet, (27) ____ having so many, she used just one.

Together they decided to sell them, but even though there were many second-hand marketplaces already in existence, they couldn't find anywhere, where their credentials as a seller (28) ____ be trusted and the bags' value recognised.

It sparked an idea. He established an online marketplace for second-hand designer bags, shoes, accessories and clothing. And eight years later, sales are growing 85% a year, which is not bad for someone who until he set up the business (29) ____ in tech and knew absolutely nothing about fashion.

Mr Fabre believes the firm's focus on authenticating the products is helping it to stand (30) ____ . The aim is also to make all the items and the website itself look like a designer (31) ____ than a used goods website.

The firm offers (32) ____ prices for those who buy designer labels. So, it seems that luxury and second hand can go together after all.
